INTERNATIONAL FALL FESTIVAL

The National Museum of Language was pleased to again participate in the annual festival sponsored by the City of College Park and the University of Maryland on November 6, 2004. This year's planners broadened the festival's appeal and converted the "Oktoberfest" of past years into the "International Fall Festival," turning Ritchie Coliseum into a mini-world's fair. In addition to the traditional Bavarian fare, folk dancing, Alpine horns, and oompah bands, the festival featured Latino bands, salsa lessons, and several South American dishes. The very talented a cappella singing group "The Suspenders" also presented several selections. NML members who attended our 2004 Annual Meeting or our Holiday Reception last December will remember this group of Roosevelt High School students that provided entertainment at both events. The walls of the Coliseum were lined with vendors and activities for children; this year the planners also provided some outdoor activities such as rock climbing.

In keeping with the international theme, the NML expanded its display this year to include books, newspapers, pamphlets and art from around the world. Associate Rachel Liu provided informative and colorful pamphlets on Taiwan, while Associate Yuki Onoe demonstrated Japanese calligraphy, writing visitors' names and words such as "peace" and "love" in Japanese for fascinated visitors. Yasuke Torii enhanced the afternoon by playing selections on the Japanese guitar. Associate Manuel Guevara provided Ecuadorian carvings and woven items that brightened a corner of the NML display. A selection of brochures on a number of African languages, donated by the National Association of Self-Instructional Language Programs, proved to be of especial interest to visitors seeking guidance in that very subject. Board member Joseph Page and Associate Jane Page donated a basket of foodstuffs from around the world that was auctioned off. Antoine Goho, a local artist, won the basket and two second-place winners, Norma Cunningham and Barbara Smith, received NML memberships. Vice President Whitney Reed and NML Member Fran Reed donated a Latino Barbie Doll (Collector's Edition) and a set of Hot Wheels cars, very popular items that were also raffled off. NML exhibitors were delighted to welcome a number of local members of the Museum who were among the visitors to the festival.

As we have come to expect, the NML display was very well received. The literature, attractions and information drew a steady stream of visitors from opening at 1:00 p.m. till closing at 8:00 p.m. As arriving guests entered the exhibition hall, they were offered a Chinese fortune cookie featuring "welcome" in seven different languages. Festival planners directed those seeking translations to the NML exhibit. While a count of NML visitors was not taken, this year's total attendance at the festival topped 1,100 and we can be confident that many of them stopped by to check out the display. And most walked off with a Museum brochure, an NML calendar/bookmark commemorating the Year of Languages 2005, or a pencil marked with the Museum's name. Given the level of success, Board members are eager to work with City and University planners on next year's festival.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

The start of a new year is a time for thoughtful review and a time for optimism—at least it is here at the NML. As you read the accounts of our activities in the following pages, we hope you will join with us in our review, as in our optimism. Many, if not most of you, support us through your membership dues. Let me assure you how valuable your support is, and how much you share the credit for our success. Without you, we could not pay the rent, purchase equipment, pay the printer, pay the postage. Frankly, without you, we would not have the courage to continue. So, we invite you, as you follow our activities, to please believe that your contribution—whether of funds, of work, or of ideas—has been essential to our progress.

Top billing for the past year goes, without question, to the radio program The Five Minute Linguist—Talkin’ About Talk. Conceived and created through the outstanding efforts of NML Associate Dr. Rick Rickerson, the NML has been pleased and honored to be a co-sponsor of the program. We are overwhelmed that so many distinguished professionals in the field of language have contributed their time and expertise to this project. We predict that the usefulness and popularity of this body of work will last far beyond the Year of Languages 2005 that it helps to commemorate.

The Museum, of course, is pursuing other programs in honor of the Year of Languages. Among the first is the work with Parkdale High School reported in these pages. Our Spring Symposium, which we announce herein, will be a part of this observance. In our next issue we will present the City of College Park’s proclamation of the Year of Languages. We also wish to commend the Rotary International for its Dictionary Project described here, for it is most in keeping with the spirit of this special year.

We are very pleased to note the success of both the International Fall Festival and our Holiday Reception. At both events we were able to meet with our members, make new friends, renew acquaintances, and recruit new volunteers—all very worthwhile goals. We call attention with pride to the articles by and about our members, whose work means so much to the field of language. In looking ahead, the promise of the website is of the highest importance to our progress.

As always, in the year ahead, it is to the people who join with us in our endeavors that we offer our especial thanks. We are extremely fortunate and honored that our Keynote Speaker at our Annual Meeting in June will be the distinguished linguist, Dr. Richard Brecht.

In conclusion, it is my great pleasure to recognize our Directors and Associates for their hard work, for their ideas and encouragement, and to express once again my personal appreciation for their efforts.

NML Annual Meeting 2005

The Seventh Annual Meeting of the National Museum of Language will be held at the University of Maryland University College Inn and Conference Center Mont Clare Café in College Park, Maryland, on Saturday, June 11, 2005. The event will, as usual, be divided into two parts: 1) a business meeting of the Board of Directors at the NML office and 2) the reception and dinner featuring our keynote speaker in the Mont Clare Café.

Dr. Richard Brecht, Director of the Center for the Advanced Study of Language in College Park, Maryland, will deliver the keynote address, “Meeting the Language Needs of the Nation: We can and we will!” Dr. Brecht is a former member of the NML Board of Directors and former director of the National Foreign Language Center. His address will surely find an enthusiastic and responsive audience.

The reception will begin at 5:30 p.m. followed by dinner at 6:30 p.m. A silent auction featuring goods and services donated by generous local area merchants will take place during the reception. Snacks and a cash bar will be available.

The dinner will feature a choice of grilled chicken with a lemon/herb sauce, baked talapia, or the chef’s choice of a vegetarian option. All meals will be served with a house salad, rolls, beverages, and chef’s choice of dessert. Tickets are $22 for members and $25 for non-members. So be sure to mark your calendars, plan to bring any guests you wish, and join us for an enjoyable and informative evening.

Holiday Reception

The Board of Directors of the NML once again hosted a holiday reception for members and friends to celebrate the holiday season. Held on December 5, 2004, in its offices in the Executive Building in College Park, the reception featured holiday music, displays and exhibits, door prize, and an array of tempting foods and beverages supplied by dedicated NML members.

Guests were entertained by a group of wonderful young singers from Eleanor Roosevelt High School in Greenbelt, Maryland. Known as The Suspenders, this group provided the audience with their renditions of popular holiday season songs. The door prize (a set of lute-shaped crystal candlestick holders) was won by Mr. Dermot Owens, husband of former NML Board of Directors member Mrs. Anna Owens.

Various exhibits on the NML were featured in the NML office area and an adjacent room, both of which were decorated in festive holiday style. The main exhibit in the office conference area was a selection of antique radios and broadcasting equipment reflecting the evolution of this mainstay of American life. These were on loan for the occasion by special arrangement with Brian Belanger, Curator of the Radio and Television Museum of Bowie, Maryland. Other exhibits sponsored by the NML featured the architectural design plans for an interim NML building, a five-panel display on dialects in general and the Smith Island dialect in particular, an Indo-European language tree, the Allen Walker Read collection of books on language, and pictures of NML events and people. Additional items on display were the completed volumes of the Dictionary of American Regional English (on loan from the Hyattsville Branch of the Prince George’s County Memorial Library System) and a series of language courseware CDs donated to the Museum by the National Association for Self-Instruction Language Programs (NASILP).

The star exhibit of the reception was provided by the opportunity for all to hear the first three CD programs of the Five Minute Linguist series developed by NML member Dr. Rick Rickerson and jointly sponsored by the College of Charleston in South Carolina and the NML. Played between songs, the programs, entitled “Talkin’ About Talk,” covered presentations on Dialects, the Origin of Language, and Esperanto. These presentations are among the first of what will ultimately be 52 programs to be broadcast on public radio, we hope eventually nation-wide. Attendees were unanimous in their praise for the entertainment, refreshments, the various exhibits and displays, and the “Talkin’ About Talk” programs in particular.

The reception ended with a special presentation by NML President Dr. Amelia C. Murdoch to Dr. Donald Horrigan, Principal of the Parkdale High School in Riverdale, Maryland, of a poster for “2005 The Year of Languages” to be used in an exhibit there jointly sponsored by the NML and the High School.

Spotlight on an NML Polyglot

Since we are now in the Year of Languages, we thought it would be of interest to our membership to relate some of the recent language contributions of one of our members, Reginald Lee Heefner, of Chambersburg, Pennsylvania. A true polyglot, Mr. Heefner is competent in 15 languages—Arabic, Mandarin Chinese, Japanese, Russian, Estonian, Modern Greek, Spanish, Portuguese, French, German, Hindi, Swahili, Urdu, Latin and Sanskrit.

Heefner has put his language skills to use for the country in the U.S. Army, the U.S. Army Reserve, and as a Russian and Chinese language instructor at the National Security Agency, from which he retired in 2001. During 2004 he traveled to Grafenwoehr, Germany, to teach basic survival Arabic to soldiers preparing to deploy to Afghanistan and Iraq. He later traveled to Utah to study the Egyptian dialect of Arabic. While there he also taught Greek, Estonian, Chinese and Spanish as a volunteer at a missionary training center. To stimulate interest in languages during this past fall, he taught conversational Spanish, conversational German and conversational Arabic at the Center for Careers and Technology in the Carlisle Area School District in Pennsylvania. During 2005, he is scheduled to teach Mandarin Chinese as well as Arabic and Spanish at this same adult education center. He has also taught various languages at the Gettysburg campus of the Harrisburg Area Community College.

Heefner’s interest in language began at an early age when he was in a sledding accident where he smashed his head into a brick wall. He went into a coma and when he emerged from it, the doctors feared that the accident had left him with permanent brain damage that would prevent him from learning. Heefner knew that they were wrong and set out to prove it. He decided to read every book in the local library, starting with an introduction to ancient Greek that took him six months to finish. In high school he immersed himself in Spanish, French, German and Latin. After enlisting in the U.S. Army, he was trained as a Chinese linguist and began his own study of Japanese. After discharge from the Army, he earned a degree in Russian from the University of Maryland. When later hired by the National Security Agency as a Chinese linguist, he went to night school and earned a bachelor’s degree in Chinese. Somewhere along the way, he also taught himself Hindi, Swahili, Urdu, Sanskrit, Estonian and Portuguese.

In addition to his language competency, Heefner holds sixth degree black belts in judo and jiu-jitsu and was an alternate for the 1976 U.S. Olympic Judo Team. He was recently selected to be included in the 2005 edition of “Who’s Who in the World” for his contributions in the field of foreign languages.

News of NML Website

Progress in bringing the NML website to life is real, although slower than we anticipated. From the technical point of view, we have now acquired a new webhost server that will improve our administrative functions and add considerably to our ability to serve our members. Furthermore, we have applied for the right to use the “museum” domain name, which is restricted to museums. Our Technical Consultant, Richard Bliff, has been particularly helpful in this connection.

As for administration of the website, we have appointed a Web Editorial Board, which will be responsible for establishing policies governing the NML Website, subject to approval of the Board of Directors. It will also be responsible for reviewing general format and all content prior to posting on the site. Members are Whitney E. Reed, Chair; Jennifer DeCamp, Webmaster; Helen L. Carpenter; and Wayne H. Slater.

Although suggestions and contributions from any source will be welcome, all proposals will be submitted to the Programs Committee for appropriate action. Job descriptions have been prepared for Web Editor, Web Assistant Editor, and Web Response Board. At present these are volunteer positions, but funding will be sought to provide for compensation for these positions in the future. At this time, when we do not yet know the volume and nature of responses to our site, the work of the Web Response Board will be especially important. We hope that among our readers there will be some of you eager to be involved in this newest aspect of our work. If you wish to receive more information or to offer your services, please contact us at info@lanmuseum.org, or telephone us at 301-864-7071.

Efforts to set up a website for the NML have been ongoing, but success has been slow in coming. Our present work seems to be producing results and we want to urge you to become a part of this important endeavor. Volunteer, send us your ideas, ask your friends to volunteer—and when we go online, please be sure to be among the first to visit us!
Radio Program Update

We are now six months into the Museum’s cooperative venture with the College of Charleston to develop a series of five-minute radio broadcasts on language, and there is a good deal of news to report, all of it good. The series had its debut on January 6, 2005, under the title Talkin’ About Talk, and was announced in a recent issue of South Carolina Educational Radio’s program guide as follows:

Language defines us as human beings. It’s universal. And yet, we have so many questions about it. Which language is the oldest? Why is Chinese so difficult? How do babies learn to talk? Where did the southern dialect come from? A U.S. Senate resolution proclaims 2005 as the Year of Languages in the U.S. and the new ETV radio series, Talkin’ About Talk, is part of the national celebration. Once a week throughout the year, the series examines language-related topics as a regular five-minute feature on Conversations with Joan Mack (Thursday, 6:30 - 7:00 P.M.).

In a lively and informal style, the Five-Minute Linguist at the College of Charleston - based on contributions from leading linguists across the country - explores the nature of language and answers questions that may be on your mind. How many languages are there? What did Adam and Eve speak in the Garden of Eden? What causes foreign accents? Whatever happened to Esperanto? Talkin’ about Talk is co-sponsored by the College of Charleston and the National Museum of Language.

It has been gratifying to see how many of our colleagues in the language and linguistics community have offered to contribute time and talent to the project, including NML members. Museum Associates Sherri Spaid Long and Frank Borchardt are representing the Museum on the project review board, reading, editing and commenting on each of the scripts. Orin Hargraves and Amelia Murdock have contributed scripts. Whitney Reed and Glenn Nordin have been very active in promoting the program. Associate Margaret Reynolds, in her role as Executive Director of the Linguistic Society of America has been instrumental in helping Dr. Nickerson identify experts to write material for the broadcasts. So far, 40+ linguists and other language professionals around the country have committed to writing scripts; drafts have been submitted for most of the program segments, and roughly a quarter of the segments have been written, reviewed, revised and recorded. Only six of the 52 segments in the series are still unspoken for. The roster of authors is impressive, ranging from language teachers, federal linguists, and freelance writers to some of the well-known linguists in the field. The list includes people such as:

- Dennis R. Preston - Distinguished Professor of Linguistics at Michigan State and well-known expert on American dialects. Recently cited on the NPR TV special: “Do You Speak American?”
- John Algeo - Professor Emeritus at the University of Georgia. Editor of The Cambridge History of the English Language and co-author of The Origins and Development of the English Language (5th ed. 2004).

- Walt Wolfram - Distinguished Professor of English Linguistics at North Carolina State. Hosted his own NPR program about Carolina dialects on public radio.
- Paul Lewis - Editor of Ethnologue, recently published in its 15th edition.
- June tilton - Nationally-recognized leader in language teaching methodology. Dean of the College of Arts and Humanities at Weber State University.
- Robert Rodman - Professor of computer science at North Carolina State. Co-author of the popular linguistics text An Introduction to Language.
- Gladyse Lipton - Director of the National Foreign Language in the Elementary Schools (FLES) Institute.
- Nina Garrett - Director of the Center for Language Study at Yale.
- Frederick H. Jackson - Senior linguist at the Foreign Service Institute.
- Kevin Hendzel - Former head linguist on the technical translation staff of the President’s Hotline between the White House and the Kremlin. Currently national media spokesman for the American Translators Association.
- Akira Y. Yamamoto - Professor of anthropology and linguistics at the University of Kansas. Chair of the Linguistic Society of America’s Committee on Endangered Languages and Their Preservation. Co-chaired UNESCO’s Ad Hoc Expert Group on Endangered Languages.

We have not heard from National Public Radio about the question of national distribution of the program from its headquarters, but the series will be aired on Wisconsin Public Radio starting in February 2005, and a number of other stations have expressed interest. For a complete list of the authors, the topics to be covered, and additional information about the series, we encourage you to visit the website: www.cofo.edu/linguist .

Spring Symposium: Language and the Access to Justice

For its spring activity in 2005, the National Museum of Language will present a Symposium on “Language and the Access to Justice.” It will be held in the Council Chambers of the College Park City Hall on the afternoon of Saturday, April 30. Full details will be given in a later announcement. The public is invited and there is no charge. As space will be limited, reservations are recommended.

It is proposed that it be in the form of a panel discussion. Suggestions as to possible panelists are welcome and may be addressed to Dr. Amelia C. Murdoch: email acmurdoch@languagemuseum.org or telephone 301-864-7071.

The College Park City Hall is located in the center of downtown College Park, just off U.S. Route One, at 4500 Knox Road. Public parking is limited, but the College Park/UMD Metro station is within easy walking distance. Directions will be available.
Language Exhibits at Parkdale High

The National Museum of Language wishes to encourage the display of language-oriented exhibits at local schools, especially in conjunction with the theme "2005—The Year of Languages." Last November, through the efforts of NML Director Joseph E. Page, a meeting was held between NML representatives and school officials at Parkdale High School of Riverdale, Maryland. NML President Amelia C. Murdoch and Director Page presented the NML proposal to Dr. Donald Harrigan, Principal; Dr. Georges Latchman, Foreign Language Professor; and Ms. Bianca Johnson, Media Specialist. The Parkdale officials agreed to review the proposal with a view to initiating projects consistent with the theme of "2005—Year of Languages." After the meeting, Principal Harrigan graciously escorted Murdoch and Page on a tour of Parkdale facilities. Of particular interest were the areas available for meetings, the school library, and a Spanish class, observed in session.

In a follow-up report Latchman has indicated that initially an exhibit on mother tongues spoken at Parkdale is to be presented by their students in a display at the school library, beginning this February. Latchman also expressed his hope that this would be the first in a series of activities that will emphasize their interest in world languages and eventually lead to building a set of artifacts related to the development of languages around the world. The NML, in support of the students’ work, will offer the school a CD containing ten of the programs to be offered on the Five Minute Linguist radio program entitled “Talkin’ about Talk” now being co-sponsored by NML.

It is also interesting to note that Latchman heads a “World Languages Lobby” which is embarked in a long-term project to record audio translation of the “Gospel of Mark” in the 3000+ unwritten languages of the world.

Rotary International Dictionary Project

In October 2004, Ray Sizemore, Governor-Elect of Rotary International District 7620 (Central Maryland and the District of Columbia), announced a plan to distribute “Student's Dictionaries” free of charge to all third grade elementary school students within his District. This project was planned in conjunction with, and to honor, the Centennial of Rotary International in 2005. Coincidentally, the University of Maryland-affiliated Center for the Advanced Study of Language (CASL), whose mission is to make the nation and the world safer and more responsive to economic and social needs by enhancing Americans’ foreign language capabilities, has officially proclaimed 2005 as “The Year of Languages.” This action coincides with the action the National Museum of Language (NML) initiated to have the City of College Park, Maryland, where NML was founded and is located, proclaim 2005 as the “Year of Languages” in College Park.

The “Student’s Dictionary” (2004 edition) distributed by Rotary Clubs in its District 7620 is a soft-bound volume that contains extensive information including the U.S. Constitution and Declaration of Independence, biographies of U.S. Presidents (including the current President), a world atlas, weights and measures, and other useful information. The dictionaries were given to the students to keep and, as expressed by Rotary, “with hopes that they will continue to use them for years.” A volume of the “Student’s Dictionary” was presented to NML for its library.

Based on reports to date from Rotarian David Satterfield, who managed distribution for the College Park Club area, 59,000 dictionaries costing a total of $86,000 have been distributed within Rotary District 7620. The participating Maryland Rotary Clubs were College Park, Bladensburg, Beltsville, Greenbelt, Laurel, Upper Marlboro, Central Prince George’s and Northern Prince George’s.

NML Director Joseph E. Page participated in the distribution within the College Park area and found the experience and the appreciation expressed by school officials, teachers, and students to be most gratifying. Most important, the dictionaries represent a significant contribution to the better understanding and use of language by the young recipients of the “Student’s Dictionaries.”

Membership

Letters have again been sent to all NML members urging them to renew their membership for 2005. Our membership now extends to 17 states and three foreign countries. In the last two years we have succeeded in increasing our membership by 10% each year, and we have set the same goal for 2005. We urge you to help us by recruiting new members. Please use the application form in this Newsletter to approach your friends, relatives and colleagues. Have them mail the form to the address on the last page of this Newsletter. You might even consider giving a gift membership to someone you think might be interested in the goals of the NML. These are great ways of showing your continued support. For those of our members who are actively associated with a college or university, please consider the possibility of persuading them to become institutional members of the NML.

Revised January 2000

NML Associates 2005

We are pleased to announce the appointment of Museum Associates for 2005. Our Associates have been a most valuable resource over the past years. They serve as advisers to the Board and vote for candidates for Director. They also serve on committees and as committee chairs. They may be asked to assist on particular tasks or attend specific meetings of the Board, although they may not vote on such meetings. As representatives of the NML, they broaden our reach to the wider language community and are frequently the Museum's first point of contact in launching a new endeavor. Appointments are for one year and may be renewed.

The following Associates have been re-appointed for 2005: P. Manuel Guereina, Kirk Hazen, Marion E. Hines, Dora F. Kennedy, M. J. "Mike" Levin, Rachel Lian, Sheri Spaine Long, Lee Luber, Kathleen E. Miller, Yaki Ono, Olga J. Page, Margaret W. Reynolds, and Natalie Schilling-Entes.

We welcome five newly-appointed Associates: Marsha A. Abbott, Brian Belanger, Frank L. Borchardt, Donna Christian, and Earl M. Rickerson.

The challenges and opportunities of the coming year are many. The participation of our Associates and their contributions to our mission have been and will be essential to our success. It is a pleasure to recognize them here and express our deep appreciation for their continuing support.
